

Experienced Derivatives Brokers at The PRICE Futures Group

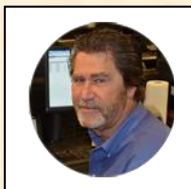

They can assist clients with implementation of various aspects of Rohr research. Their experience and insight makes them particularly suitable to support clients with everything from short term finesse of daily ROHR Alert!! US Equities-focused updates to the broader trend perspectives on the multi-market global research in the Rohr-Blog.

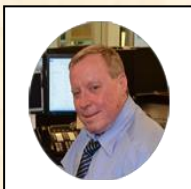

Stuart Unger is Price Group's head of Business Development. It was through a chance meeting with our old friend Stuart that interest in PRICE Group taking advantage of our market insights first developed. Stuart is a long time Chicago Mercantile Exchange member, and has been very prominent in many aspects of PRICE Group's business development.

Marc Nemenoff is a Senior Account Executive with previous extensive floor trading experience and authors The Nemenoff Report. That is his daily overview with specific perspectives on market direction across a broad range of instruments. He is also an experienced speaker on many aspects of markets and shares Rohr's macro-technical market approach.

William Frejlich is a Senior Account Executive with extensive trading floor experience, and for the past twenty years has authored his weekly The Windy City Trader newsletter. He specializes in both straight futures and options strategies, and combinations using both. He is very adept at counseling both novice traders and highly sophisticated investors.

Jim May is also involved in Trading Operations at PRICE Group, and is a founding member of the Chicago Board Options Exchange (CBOE) with over twenty years of experience in that role. For the past twenty years he has been assisting both retail and institutional clients in their involvement in both complex derivatives strategies as well as the equities market.
