Rohr INTERNATIONAL is primarily a technical trend analysis advisor that includes politico-economic observations within the context of the prevailing trends. We believe thorough and cohesive trend analysis requires review of many factors, including the major fundamental background and event horizons, as well as a sense of how fundamental influences and technical indications are blending. Ultimately prices move due to a combination of fundamental forces and technical psychology.

Aggressive evaluation of significant technical indications across many time frames is required to develop the long-, intermediate- and short-term trend insights required to serve our broad clientele. The scope of this analysis includes monthly, weekly and daily histories, with moving average, oscillator, MACD, RSI and Stochastic indications assessed for appropriate time frames.

Clients achieve significant benefits from the Rohr Report. It focuses on confluences of trend indications which develop across time. These reinforce the critical nature of specific price levels at distinct points in time. To communicate these insights the Rohr Report provides an extensive review of key trend decision levels, exploring the basis of the most important technical patterns and trend indications. Concise telephone consultation appropriate to client needs is also available.
