Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

This is an early critical short-term view in light of how the market is trading:

As noted previous, each of the previous MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE slides below 1,975-70 congestion (during August and September) overran interim supports in the 1,960 and 1,930 areas to at least test the 1,900 area and sometimes fall well below it. And the test of the 1,900 area (with some slippage) is just what we saw on Monday.

Here's the critical consideration this morning: Whether it can sustain activity back above the failed support in the 1,932-25 area on the projected higher opening this morning is now critical. In addition to 1,925 being the early low on Friday before it was ultimately knocked out, there is also be a current 1,926 UP Break out of its aggressive down channel (from last Tuesday's reaction high back up into the low end of the failed 2,020-10 support.)

Of course, if it succeeds in sustaining that higher activity, the next resistances are once again not until the 1,958-62 area and 1,975-70. If it fails back below 1,925, we suspect yet another test of 1,900 or even lower levels is possible.

On another note, the recent weak psychology in the equities has had an effect on the other asset classes, especially putting the sustained bid back into the GOVVIES. And if the equities can indeed sustain and extend the early rally today, then we would expect the govvies to come back under pressure in the near-term.
