Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

This is an early critical short-term view in light of how the market is trading:

As noted previous, each of the previous MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE slides below 1,975-70 congestion (during August and September) overran interim supports in the 1,960 and 1,930 areas to at least test the 1,900 area and sometimes fall well below it. And the test of the 1,900 area (with some slippage) is just what we saw on Monday and again early (in pre-opening electronic trade) Tuesday morning.

Here's the critical consideration this morning: Whether it can once again sustain activity back above the failed support in the 1,932-25 area on the projected higher opening this morning is now critical again. That said, it is looking quite a bit better than on Tuesday morning's fleeting bulge above it.

And in fact the Beige Book release at 13:00 CST today might have something to do with whether it holds up. The Beige Book has been moderately upbeat of late (consistent with the Fed's view things are 'normalizing'.) If that is the case again today, it might just succeed in sustaining higher activity.

Yet even if that is the case, we remain bearish and the next resistances are once again up into the 1,958-62 area and 1,975-70. If it fails back below 1,925 after the Beige Book this may another case of "friendly Fed anticipation" followed by demoralization once again. If so, then the failure back below 1,925 should bring another test of 1,900, or even a selloff extension to the lower major 1,865-60 support. For those of you who are subscribers, see the weekend Global View TrendView video analysis at www.rohr-blog.com for more on that (available to Gold and Platinum echelon subscribers along with the Market Observations.)

On another note, the recent weak psychology in the equities has had an effect on the other asset classes, especially putting the sustained bid back into the GOVVIES. And if the equities can indeed sustain and extend the early rally today, then we would expect the govvies to come back under pressure in the near-term.
