Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

This is an early critical short-term view in light of how the market is trading:

No Surprises!! As noted previous, each of the previous MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE slides below 1,975-70 congestion (during August and September) overran interim supports in the 1,960 and 1,930 areas to at least test the 1,900 area and sometimes fall well below it. And the test of the 1,900 area (with some slippage) is just what we saw on Monday even if the failure below it took until Wednesday afternoon.

Having failed again from activity back above the failed support in the 1,932-25 area on higher openings both Tuesday and Wednesday, that will still be interesting resistance on any recovery back above the 1,900 area.

Here's the critical consideration this morning: Failing well back below 1,932-25 even before the Beige Book was a very negative sign, and the Beige Book was another of those uninspiring mixed indications (with actual stagnancy in the important New York district.)

MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE below 1,900 again right after it was released demonstrates the lack of ability of any mildly positive US influence to stem the broader global negativity. Yet it is only now nearing the more critical major trend support in the 1,865-60 range after sagging below the interim 1,885 level.

We always prefer when a critical area is reinforced by several major technical factors. In this case that range is not only the late September pullback low, and a major Fibonacci 0.25 retracement (from the 1,068 October 2011 low to the highs.)

It is also the major weekly up channel support for the entire trend since the 666 cycle low back in March of 2009. As such, as far and as fast as the US equities have dropped the first part of this year, whether they will now enter an extended meltdown phase will be determined by what transpires late this week into next; at least for the near-term.

[For those of you who are subscribers, see the latest Global View TrendView video analysis at www.rohr-blog.com for more on that, It is available to Gold and Platinum echelon subscribers along with the Market Observations.]

On another note, the recent weak psychology in the equities has had an effect on the other asset classes, especially putting the sustained bid back into the GOVVIES. And if the equities can indeed hold and rally from that critical lower support, we would expect the govies to come back under pressure in the near-term.
