Subject: Follow-Up ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

All of the EQUITIES are recovering a bit since Tuesday's pressure on European banks cleared up a bit today after supportive comments from Deutsche Bank officials and even the German Finance Minister!!

Yet what Janet Yellen has been saying since 09:00 CST is still more critical.

Here's the critical consideration for the balance of the day: As the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE has already been back up to last week's Close 1,875.30 Close it gapped down from on the opening this week. That level up to today's early 1,876.50 high will remain the key near-term resistance. Much above it a swing back up to the 1,895-1,902 area is likely.

And while it has weakened back down to (and even temporarily below) the major 1,865-60 area, what transpires after she is done with her extensive House Financial Services Committee Q&A in approximately 15 minutes will be critical for how the short-term trend is acting in the context of that important longer term area this afternoon. Any weakness will need to fail back below the 1,865-60 support Tolerance at the 1,850 level to be convincing, with the next support at 1,831 that was a good level to watch on Tuesday as well.
