Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

All of the EQUITIES being impacted by problems with the profit outlook and concerns over the balance sheet stability of European banks seem to have now been supported to some degree by Deutsche Bank's debt buyback proposal as well as the OPEC production cut deal. however, the latter should always be taken with a barrel-full of salt. In that regard, the MARCH NYMEX CRUDE OIL FUTURE is more critical on this rally back near 30.00 than on previous short-term recoveries. And at least so far it has not demonstrated any ability to sustain a rally above 30.00.

That has caused the US EQUITIES to back off once again as well from this week's higher opening. It is also important to note that the recent EQUITIES improvement is more so on central banker supportive comments than anything to do with still across-the-board weak global economic data.

MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE gapping back below interim support at 1,831 last Thursday morning to the next lower interim support at 1,813 and even testing the August 1,804 low prior to ratcheting up on the OPEC hint at a production cut deal. Those remain the key lower supports.

Here's the critical consideration today: As important is its ability to recover back above the major 1,865-60 area (and its Tolerance at 1,850.) However, at least so far it has failed to get above more telling short-term trend channel resistance in the low-mid 1,800s this morning (which remains in that area through late today.)

It is instead hangin around its Friday, February 5th 1,875 Close that is also a DOWN Break and key Fibonacci retracement level on this rally. Whether it can exceed that low-mid 1,800s resistance or weakens back below 1,875 will be the key indication early this week.
