Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE rightfully rallied in the wake of Wednesday's more dovish FOMC announcement, projections revisions and Chair Yellen's press conference.

What was most interesting is the way in which the JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE that had been trading at an unusually large $10 discount to the MARCH future was able to immediately make up the difference to push above the key higher resistance Thursday morning even prior to the March contract expiration. This is why as expiration nears we have always recommended assessing the second month against the front month levels.

This was a very constructive sign. It was also not a huge surprise after the forbearance shown by the FOMC in lowering its likely further 2016 rate hikes in Wednesday's revised projections from 4 to only 2. That was in effect nothing less than a forward view 0.50% easing. It should keep the US equities psychology positive in the near term, even if the background being weak enough to warrant that FOMC shift is still troubling.

Here's the critical consideration today: The JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE push above the top of the 2,010-20 range on Thursday morning after the FOMC on Wednesday put it above the front month resistance.

Having Closed above it after hitting the next interim higher resistance at 2,035 leaves that as the next key level. As it was also above 2,035 early Friday morning and is continuing to respect it as near term support this morning, the burden of proof is on the bears to knock it back down below it or likely suffer a further rally. Next interim resistances are 2,050 and 2,060 areas, with the ultimate more major resistance not until 2,075-85.

And of course, the 2,010-20 range is now significant lower support.
