Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

We have noted for a while that JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE could have rallied further above 2,060 on current momentum even though it was nearing more prominent 2,075-85 higher resistance that leaves less upside potential. That manifested itself in the selloff into Friday morning that did not last very long at all.

This is typical of what happens when bears cannot create secondary weakness after short-term selloffs in rallies in what are ultimately bear markets... which we believe the US EQUITIES will still be once the dust settles after the strong seasonal wears off later into April. Yet for now and as noted previous, Janet Yellen's speech last Tuesday seemed to bring a generally dovish end to the reversals by the Fed's more hawkish minions since the FOMC meeting three weeks ago indicated there was a more dovish view.

She even suggested a potential for the next moves in federal funds to be down instead of up if the economic data warranted, and even opened the door to the possibility that *Fed Quantitative Easing could be resumed if necessary! That is consistent with our previous views the December FOMC rate hike was merely the full extension of the Fed's 'normalcy bias'. She has now constructively reversed that, and as also noted previous we expect the Fed's view to underpin the equities on selloffs..

You can read our mildly marked-up version of her speech at <http://bit.ly/1TimEk6>.

Here's the critical consideration today: The JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE holding into the 2,020-10 range two weeks ago Thursday morning and barely testing the top of it last Tuesday morning prior to pushing up after Janet Yellen's dovish speech are the sort of resilient signs we expected. As we have noted for the past two weeks, as long as it held the 2,020-10 area, it should still be able to rally to higher resistances.

And having exceeded the interim 2,035 resistance after her speech text was released left it finishing last Tuesday into next interim resistance in the 2,050 area, and pushing up last Wednesday to test the 2,060 area. Yet it began to temporarily fade from there Thursday, and was now even well below 2,050 Friday morning.

However, recovering after barely testing the 2,035 higher of those violated lower resistances early Friday left it strengthening as we suspected it would, even as early as later on Friday. Pushing above 2,060 by Friday's Close leaves that as near term support, yet with the far more major resistance up into 2,075-85 as noted for some time now.
