Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

We have noted for a while that JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE could have rallied further above 2,060 on current momentum, yet the fact it is nearing more prominent 2,075-85 higher resistance leaves less upside potential. That has manifested itself once again with a selloff on negative global influences, just like last Wednesday into Friday. However, remember that this did not last very long at all.

It is likely to exhibit another holding action at one or another of the key lower supports that is typical of what happens when bears cannot create secondary weakness after short-term selloffs in rallies in what are ultimately bear markets... which we believe the US EQUITIES will still be once the dust settles after the strong seasonal wears off later into April. Yet for now and as noted previous, Janet Yellen's speech last Tuesday seemed to bring a generally dovish end to the reversals by the Fed's more hawkish minions since the FOMC meeting three weeks ago indicated there was a more dovish view.

You can read our mildly marked-up version of her speech at <http://bit.ly/1TimEk6>.

Here's the critical consideration today: The JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE holding into the 2,020-10 range two weeks ago Thursday morning and barely testing the top of it last Tuesday morning prior to pushing up after Janet Yellen's dovish speech are the sort of resilient signs we expected. As we have noted for the past two weeks, as long as it holds the 2,020-10 area, it should still be able to rally to higher resistances.

And having exceeded the interim 2,035 resistance after her speech text was released left it finishing last Tuesday into next interim resistance in the 2,050 area, and pushing up last Wednesday to test the 2,060 area. Yet it began to temporarily fade from there Thursday, and was now even well below 2,050 Friday morning.

However, recovering Friday after barely testing the 2,035 higher of those violated lower resistances left it strengthening as we suspected it would. The question now into further US data today and the anticipation of the FOMC meeting minutes release Wednesday afternoon will it indeed see it hold the 2,035 area (Tolerance 2,032) again, or will it need to sag all the way back to 2,020-10 prior to stabilizing?

In any event, once it does we suspect another push back up to or above 2,060 is still likely, as the far more major resistance up into 2,075-85 is still likely to be tested prior to the market being ready to roll back over into a bear once again.
