Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

We are less circumspect on the JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE today even though it is once again back into the middle of the recent well-established trading range. Yet within that range it has demonstrated quite a bit of active short-term price activity. However, that still means it is advisable to wait for it to return to the key technical trend levels once again.

The fundamental background remains weak, as reinforced once again by another set of downbeat OECD COmposite Leading Indicators this morning. Yet that is within a renewed accommodative stance by the Federal Reserve after Janet Yellen's recent speech that was more dovish than expected. This was reinforced by last Wednesday's FOMC meeting release that confirmed her ability (as was the case with all of her predecessors) to dominate the overall FOMC decisions if not the pronouncements from the more hawkish Fed minions along the way.

Here's the critical consideration today: As we saw last week, JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE can get to the key technical levels in a hurry, and then still conform to trend expectations. Note how after stalling into 2,060 area three times in the past week-and-a-half without getting up anywhere near more prominent 2,075-85 higher resistance, it readily sagged back down for multiple tests of the lower 2,035-32 area (including temporary slippage to 2,027 last Thursday afternoon.)

And yet, here it is right back at 2,050 interim congestion (clearly an over-under at this point) this morning. And in the broader sense, even if there is any more extensive weakness below the interim 2,035-32 area, that still leaves the far more major support into the 2,020-10 range.
