Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

If anyone needed any more evidence there is indeed a Yellen Put in place, the US equities price activity into this morning should amply confirm it. We will allow that improvement in Chinese Trade figures based on better-than-expected exports (even if imports were quite weak once again) are a general tonic for the recently weaker economic psychology.

However, in spite of that there were also the weaker than expected Japanese Domestic Corporate Goods Price Index, Australia Westpac Consumer Confidence and Euro-Zone Industrial Production. Then we get to the US Advance Retail Sales much weaker-than-expected, with weakness even in the Ex-Autos figure, and even PPI coming in at -0.1% versus estimates of up between 0.2% and 0.3%. Even the Ex-Food & Energy figures were weaker.

And what is the US equities response after two days of global macro outlook warnings (OECD and IMF) and some really weak data outside of those Chinese export figures? Well, the June S&P 500 future was up 10.00 to 2,066 in overnight trading. Yet, if ‘bad news is good news’ on that reconfirmed ‘Yellen Put’, then risk-on will assist the equities even when they are hit by serial weak news. Up to a point, the psychology seems to be ‘the weaker the better’.

Here’s the critical consideration today: As we saw last week, JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE can get to the key technical levels in a hurry, and then still conform to trend expectations. Note how after stalling into 2,060 area four times in the past two weeks, it readily held multiple tests of the lower 2,035-32 area (including temporary slippage to 2,027 last Thursday afternoon.)

And it finally respected the support long enough to want to push out above 2,060 this morning in spite of all those weak influences. If that maintains, the next phase will be to see whether it stalls into or can also push out above the more prominent 2,075-85 higher resistance. If the latter, next resistances (from late 2015) are in the 2,103-2,110 range.
