Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

Even given the importance of the positive influence of the 'Yellen Put', ECB President Draghi defending the independence of the ECB at Thursday morning's press conference in the face of renewed German criticism of low rates and extended QE does not seem to have fully reassured the equities. For more on that important psychological issue see our mildly marked up version of Thursday morning's Financial Times' article at <http://bit.ly/1XK9ATS>.

Friday's US equities further slippage to the lower of the key supports does not appear to have damaged the overall up trend at this point. That would require further weakness below Friday's 2,075 trading low.

Here's the critical consideration today: June S&P 500 future previously respected the 3,035-32 support long enough to want to gap higher above 2,060. It is most interesting that it is still holding the more prominent 2,075-85 higher congestion, including a 2,078 UP Break above the major weekly down channel from the highs last summer.

Back below the lower end of 2,085 and 2,075 the June S&P 500 future would look like it has a real problem with the near-term up trend, as well as the failure (i.e. Negation) of that major weekly chart channel UP Break. Next lower support is ostensibly into the 2,060-55 area, but that sort of weakness would also put real pressure on the bulls to rescue the trend back above 2,075-78 or suffer further weakness. If it does manage to hold instead, as we expected the next resistance was up into 2,103-10, which remains the case with 2,120 above that. .
