Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

Tuesday's JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE push back above 2,055-60 makes this more interesting once again. The market stabilized after last Friday's test of the key lower support we were looking for since the stall out of the rally three weeks ago (ECB) and UP Break failure two weeks ago (FOMC & BoJ.) Now the rally has carried back up to the key failure areas from back then, and they should still represent important resistance.

Here's the critical consideration today: The June S&P 500 future weakness below 2,075-78 key support by two weeks ago Thursday into Friday was especially telling after so much ambivalent churn during what should have been a stronger phase. That is especially so with the lower of them also a Tolerance below the 2,078 major weekly chart channel UP Break. That represented a 'Negation' of that UP Break, leaving the higher zone as formidable resistance, and it remains so at present.

Recently also below next lower critical support into the mid-April 2,060-55 area gap higher meant it was likely headed into a further selloff once again. Next lower support at 2,035-32 held last Friday in spite of weakness in the US Employment report. While 2,060-55 remains the interim congestion, gapping back above it on Tuesday indicated the likely ability to test that 2,075-78 Negated major weekly channel UP Break once again as well.

That seemed to be on track on Tuesday morning's gap higher opening. The higher end of overall 2,075-2,085 congestion remains the Tolerance of that resistance. It is going to be very interesting to see how this plays out later today into the Bank of England major meeting early Thursday morning. That includes the Quarterly Inflation Report and full press conference.
