Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

Recent trend activity has been very interesting for the JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE. That it sold off in spite of all of the strong US economic data both last Friday and again on Tuesday reinforces concerns about the overall global economic performance into the balance of 2016.

Rather than simply looking at how the data is progressing, at times it is important to ask what the markets are telling us in their own right. US equities that finish the week under pressure in spite of strong data are a classical sign of a bear market shaking off near-term positive indications to reflect the overall trend.

While it might also be a sign that the Fed 'rate hike factor' is back in a 'good news is bad news' reflex, that doesn't explain why the GOVVIES are holding up so well. In the context of Friday's and yesterday morning's US economic data the JUNE T-NOTE FUTURE should be getting slammed, not just backing off into the 130-00 area support. The other international GOVVIES are also holding up reasonably well in spite of today's more extensive selloff.

Here's the critical consideration today: The June S&P 500 future weakness below 2,075-78 key support by three weeks ago Thursday into Friday was especially telling. That was the 'Negation' of the 2,078 major weekly chart channel UP Break.

Recently once again below next lower critical support into the mid-April 2,060-55 area gap higher meant it was likely headed into another further selloff. Yet it decided to rally instead on Monday. Next lower support at 2,035-32 was not quite reached prior to pushing above 2,060-55. In spite of Tuesday's further serial strong US economic data it was back down well below 2,060-55 by Tuesday's Close, which makes this afternoon's FOMC minutes release very critical. Next lower (and more major) support is the 2,020-10 area once again.
