Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

We are back from our holiday last week into the unpredictable Thursday's UK referendum on EU membership, and are glad we did not try to analyze the trends in markets last week. As events ultimately bore out, this was a pure, major 'binary' decision that did not lend itself to an Evolutionary Trend View.

Here's the critical consideration today: The key lead contract levels for the S&P 500 future remained both the 2,075-78 and 2,085 areas with 2,100 area above that. While all of those were exceeded on Thursday, the surprise UK LEAVE campaign success resulting in its decision to exit the EU knocked all global equities heavily overnight into Friday morning.

With the September S&P 500 future gapping well below 2,060-55 Friday morning and failing there on its intraday rally, further weakness took it below the 2,035-32 that held with temporary slippage Friday morning. Closing the week down into the top of the more major 2,020-10 range support left the question of whether its 2,000 area Tolerance would be violated early this week.

That appears to be occurring at present. Keep an eye on December's 1,991.50 low, from which it managed to claw its way back above 2,000. Previous drops much further below 2,000 have led to the major 1,900- area, and even the mid-low 1,800s. The one interim support along the way has been in the 1,955-43 range. Yet that did not prove very reliable in holding either last August and September or in January of this year.
