Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

The decision on whether equities would convincingly recover back above the major technical thresholds that were violated on Monday's Close seems to have been settled in favor of the bulls for now. The 'crisis' psychology that set in after Friday's morning's surprise UK referendum LEAVE the EU result has turned quite a bit more rational.

As noted Wednesday morning, there was a sense the UK government, including both major political parties, was in disarray. And their counterparts in Europe were also expressing very disparate opinions on the way forward. It gave a sense the political and economic boats were rudderless and possibly heading for a major crash into the rocks. That has abated for now.

Here's the critical consideration today: The key lead contract levels for the S&P 500 future remained both the 2,075-78 and 2,085 areas with 2,100 area above that. While all of those were exceeded last week Thursday, the surprise UK LEAVE campaign success resulting in its decision to exit the EU knocked all global equities heavily overnight into Friday morning.

With the September S&P 500 future gapping well below 2,060-55 Friday morning and failing at 2,063 on its intraday rally, further weakness took it below the 2,035-32 to Close last week down at the top of the more major 2,020-10 range. While it failed below both the 2,000 area Tolerance and December's 1,991.50 low on Monday, its gap back above them Tuesday morning was impressive.

And the full recovery back above that more major 2,010-20 range extended not only above 2,032-35 on Wednesday morning's gap higher, but also back above the 2,055-60 area. That leaves the higher range as near-term support, with increased likelihood there will be another test of 2,075-78, 2,085 and even possibly the low-2,100 area.
