Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

The decision on whether equities would convincingly recover back above the major technical thresholds that were violated on last week's Monday Close was settled in favor of the bulls. The 'crisis' psychology that set in after the surprise UK referendum LEAVE the EU result had turned quite a bit more rational.

While some of the political and economic risks seem to have returned, the US EQUITIES remain among the more buoyant stock markets. Surprisingly one of the most interesting aspects is the UK FTSE strength (see the www.rohr-blog.com 'Advantage FTSE' Thursday afternoon post for more.)

Here's the critical consideration today: The key lead contract levels for the S&P 500 future remained both the 2,075-78 and 2,085 areas with 2,100 area above that. While all of those were exceeded prior the surprise UK LEAVE campaign success, the market opened below all of them on the LEAVE reaction a week ago Friday.

Gapping well below 2,060-55 that Friday morning and also violating 2,035-32, the more major 2,020-10 range and even failing below both the 2,000 area Tolerance and December's 1,991.50 low last week Monday looked really bad. However, that was all part of the panic selling that did not maintain.

And the full recovery back above all of those levels to retest the 2,100 area by last Friday means all of those lower levels are back in place as potential support. Already back down to the 2,085 area Tuesday morning, it is now weakening again below the 2,078-75 area. Therefore, a retest of 2,060-55 prior to holding for the next push up would seem likely.
