Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

As noted Friday morning, the anonymous old adage “the market is a creature of expectations” seemed to be at work. After the ‘Goldilocks’ equities psychology was reinstated on weaker US economic data since the Jackson Hole Policy Symposium three weeks ago, more extensive expected QE from Mario Draghi at last Thursday’s ECB didn’t happen.

After that the markets knew they were going to need to endure a return of major communication from those hawkish Fed minions. As such, it is no surprise that the US equities were moving down on Friday. Yet part of the degree of that selloff was the concern over what generally dovish Fed governor Lael Brainard might say on Monday. In the event she was still very dovish, and that rescued the US equities from their previous extreme weakness. Yet they are now down near key lower supports once again.

This is the critical consideration:

Given the weekly Oscillator shift up to 2,175-80 last week, the 2,185 interim September S&P 500 future congestion was very important in the short term, as we had seen all week. After sagging back below the 2,185 on ECB disappointment, 2,170-65 was more important with a key congestion Tolerance at 2,155.

That more critical 2,155 level also failed on Friday’s impromptu Brainard speech announcement, which led to the violation of nominal early August 2,141.50 trading low support. That led to the drop into more prominent 2,120 and 2,105-00 congestion areas.

It is also still relevant that December S&P 500 future (front month after Thursday) stalled at no better than the 2,155 area on Monday’s sharp recovery. It was also back below 2,141.50 Tuesday morning. Whether it can recover back above that area later this week will be a key indication of whether the current rally lapses back into weakness or ratchets back up into the higher trading range once again. In the meantime, the current selloff leaves the 2,120 and 2,105-00 front month congestion areas (still $7 lower in December contract) more critical into the Bank of England (statement only) and major US data on Thursday morning.*
