Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

As noted in our Wednesday morning Alert!! with the extended comments in our “Shocker... Market Response Too!” www.rohr-blog.com post, the Trump victory did not cause anything remotely resembling a traumatic 10% meltdown that the Democrats (and even quite a few conservatives) were projecting. Our assessment of that remains the market’s capacity to look past the immediate ‘received wisdom’ to reflect the intermediate-term outlook.

In this instance it seems increasingly the case they are encouraged by the Trump constructive lower taxes and less regulation message, even if he was the worst possible messenger. With the likelihood that his worst instincts on trade and immigration will be moderated by the Republican Congress (also see Tuesday morning’s Rohr-Blog post on the extended thoughts there), the markets are left with the prospect of lower taxes and regulation.

That has resulted in the the strength of not just equities but the US dollar as well. And any return to the real growth that has been missing under the Obama regime may well be the straw that rightfully breaks the back of the long-term bond bull.

This is the (finally significantly changed) critical consideration:

December S&P 500 future had a bout of nerves from the initial overnight Tuesday concerns on the likelihood of a Trump victory. Trading well below the key 2,105-00 area and even well below its broad 2,070 Tolerance (with a trading low of 2,028) looked very bad on sheer surprise and attendant unknowns. This was a temporary sharp ‘risk-off’ reaction.

Yet by early Wednesday morning in the US it had shaken off all of that on the re-assessment that the Trump policies were actually quite a bit better than the current ones and those proposed by Secretary Clinton. That allowed the trend to recover not just up to but also above the major 2,105-00 area by the time of the US equities Regular Trading Hours opening.

In fact, by shortly after Wednesday’s opening it was well back above the 2,120 level and up into the more prominent 2,141.50 area at which it had stalled after the drop below it in early October right into the further selloff into the beginning of November. Then incredibly overrunning that as well by Wednesday’s Close it vigorously tested the next resistance into 2,155-60. (It was almost a $140 rally from the overnight low.)

Already above that as well this morning, the next higher resistance is the 2,180 area that extends all the way to the late-August 2,191.50 all-time lead S&P 500 future trading high. That is also a weekly Oscillator resistance with the next threshold not until 2,210-15 (MA-41 plus 125-130.)
