Dear Alert Service Subscriber,
This is a critical short-term view:

The acceleration of US equities bull trend out of last Wednesday into Thursday was very impressive as it continued into Friday. It begs the question of what the markets are now seeing that they did not understand previous? Yet possibly it is more so what has lapsed that might have been a drag on the US in spite of anticipated constructive changes under a Trump Presidency?

The main recent culprit is the now failed Italian governmental reform referendum, even though it was our assessment that this was not going to have any real impact on the US. Then there was Thursday's ECB meeting. Yet fears that Draghi & Co. could signal the end of their asset purchase program did not occur.

The US equities accurately anticipated Wednesday that the continued problems in the Euro-zone (see Wednesday evening's www.rohr-blog.com post on that) would mean that the ECB was going to remain accommodative even beyond the previously projected March 2017 end of their Quantitative Easing program. And it confirmed this on Thursday.

In fact, the real challenge for US equities that are now above multiple Oscillator resistances is to monitor how they progress relative to those levels (see below.) On current form the anticipation of the Trump administration tax and regulatory reforms has seemed to open the door to further upside potential.

This is the critical consideration:

That the December S&P 500 future push above the 2,180 area also finally overran the late-August 2,191.50 all-time lead S&P 500 future trading high two weeks ago.

Due to the recent more aggressive increases in weekly MA-41 (as it loses old low end Closes from the sharp early year selloff) extended weekly Oscillator levels now move up roughly $7 each week. That nearest threshold last week was 2,213-18, the low end of which is consistent with where it stalled last week and again Wednesday morning. So once that was overrun the only surprise in it pushing up to next threshold at 2,238-43 was how quickly that has transpired. And as it was also above that last week, this week's higher Oscillator levels needed to be assessed.

The Oscillator escalation into this week meant the 2,238-43 threshold shifts up to the 2,245-50 range it Closed above last Friday. As it is holding up above it (and it becomes near term lower support as well), the extended Oscillator threshold this week has moved up to 2,280, with the ultimate resistance not until 2,305-10.
