Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

This is a critical short-term view (including the political component):

Welcome to 'Binary Healthcare Day'. As noted previous, last Wednesday's Fed Day rally was likely to be a temporary affair in spite of the sharp nature of the near term rally, with the culprit in any renewed weakness likely to be the full Trump agenda presently under the cloud of stalled healthcare reform.

And that came home to roost Tuesday morning with a vengeance, as the US equities already back down to pre-FOMC levels crashed below them and the next nominal support (see below.) That is a reflection of the importance of the stalled reform agenda, which includes tax reform that is also hung up on the lack of progress on the healthcare reform issues.

And without being at all partisan or indicating any general solidarity with the very conservative and budget conscious Freedom Caucus [led by Reps Jordan (OH) and Meadows (NC)], the current form of the Ryan-inspired healthcare reform bill does have some aspects which are too similar to Obamacare. In particular, onerous regs requiring both pregnancy and neonatal care coverage are just the sort of overbearing top down dictates that the GOP said it was going to eliminate.

While there should be greater support for women's health issues the President spoke of during the campaign, including them in the initial re-opening of the healthcare marketplace is something the conservatives are rightfully challenging on both principle and cost. That should be left for future legislation which can be fully debated. Unless something changes over the next half day or so, we suspect the healthcare reform bill is in trouble, as would be the equities.

This is (still) the critical consideration:

Due to sustained aggressive increases in weekly MA-41 June S&P 500 future extended weekly Oscillator levels are moving up roughly $7 each week. Most important is the extended weekly Oscillator resistance above the 2,300 area rose to 2,369-74 this week. That is also consistent with recent 2,370 area congestion over-under the tested on Monday and violated early Tuesday morning.

As it has failed back below the 2,370 area and interim 2,350 congestion, those are now near-term resistance. That said, lower congestion and trend supports and Oscillator areas are into the 2,320 congestion area and the more major 2,300 area.

And if it somehow resumes the trend higher, recent near term higher congestion remains as nearby as the 2,380-82 area. Yet the major Oscillator threshold is not until the 2,399-2,404 range (weekly MA-41 plus 190-195) this week. That is also consistent with the 2,401 front month S&P 500 all-time high. That sort of Oscillator extension has only been seen during extreme rallies like into early April 1999.
