Subject: ROHR TREND ALERT!!

Dear Subscribers,

Coming to you much earlier than usual ahead of this morning's US CPI and Retail Sales release a bit more than 30 minutes from now. After mixed international releases those become a more important today into the later part of this week.

Leaving the rest of the macro perspective aside for the moment, the markets seem to be reinforcing our extensive Evolutionary Trend View perspectives that the current bear trend in govies (see our www.rohr-blog.com "Weekend: The 'Demand-Pull' Bond Bear" post) that may spill over into the equities. Yet as of Tuesday's US Close the markets had decided to park themselves in some key technical trend areas prior to this morning's critical economic releases.

That said, based on the broad analysis in that weekend post and our previous ALERT!! analysis, the further strength of the March S&P 500 future seems to be overrunning the next key higher resistance (more below), which is a strong sign after the previous two weeks volatile downside reaction.

This is (still) the critical consideration:

The March S&P 500 future had chewed back down through what had been overrun resistances on the way up. That included the lower support into the 2,820-30 range it held two weeks ago Tuesday into Wednesday prior to weakening below it in an orderly fashion that Thursday.

With next lower mid-January congestion in the 2,809 area also violated, the further lower support was the March S&P 500 future Negated daily DOWN Closing Price Reversal (CPR) from the same period in the 2,788.75-2,790 range. That was also violated after initially holding into midday a week ago Friday, as was the next 2,768-73 Oscillator threshold.

Once the lower interim Oscillator support in the 2,760 area and major Oscillator supports in the 2,735-25 range and 2,690-80 area were overrun (also overrunning MA-13 at 2,710), it opened the door to a test of much more major lower supports. Those were at the up channel from the 1,802.50 key early February 2016 last trading low prior to the sustained bull move getting back into gear into and after the November 2016 US election (<http://bit.ly/2FU0KAd> from Tuesday morning.)

That channel came at 2,575 last week, and was backed up by the 2,545 area weekly MA-41. Each moves up 5 points this week. So as bad as the overnight slippage looked last Tuesday morning, it was no longer at all 'overbought'.

The key now is whether it can once again surmount the recently generated 2,660 resistance (more aggressive weekly channel DOWN Break) it tested on Monday. And the overnight push higher from its Tuesday Close in that area is a bullish sign, pending whatever transpires after this morning's US economic releases. (See the weekend post for more on that more aggressive weekly channel.)
