Subject: ROHR-BLOG: NOTICE: Out Of The Office Today

Dear Subscribers,

We come to you today much earlier than usual with the notice that we will be out of the office today, returning Thursday morning.

Markets are still critical at present, yet a bit stuck while we await this afternoon's Fed decision and press conference. We are taking this opportunity to head into Chicago for the annual Futures Industry Association EXPO. As such, please refer back to last weekend's and early week extensive analysis for now.

That said, from the show we will obviously be monitoring this afternoon's FOMC rate decision and especially the press conference, and will have a full report into Thursday morning. In the meantime, all previous background assessments (especially for the UK Brexit process and US-China trade negotiations) still stand.

And as a reminder, that Fed decision and press conference will occur one hour earlier in the UK, Ireland and Europe than the usual difference to US EDT, as Europe has already shifted back to its Standard Time this week while the US shift does not occur until next Sunday. That means the 14:00 EDT rate decision announcement and 14:30 EDT Fed Chair Powell press conference will occur at 18:00 and 18:30 respectively in the UK and Ireland, and one hour later in Europe.
