Subject: ROHR NOTICE: Holiday Today

Dear Subscribers,

We are out on a one-day holiday today, returning to the office Friday morning.

That said, we note that there has been no negative response in the US equities to the Fed's nominally less accommodative stance outlined in Wednesday afternoon's FOMC statement and projections revisions. That was then reinforced during Chair Yellen's press conference.

This is not a surprise, as the US equities are far more focused on the massive storm reconstruction spending boom to take place from Q4 onward. That outlook based on Tropical Storm Harvey and Hurricane Irma is now expanded in light of the Hurricane Maria damage to Puerto Rico and the already devastated US Virgin Islands. Our sympathy and support goes out to all those folks.

Beyond that we refer you back to yesterday's ALERT!! for the extended comments on the current critical considerations on the trend evolution.

Best regards,

The Rohr Alert!! Team
