Subject: ROHR NOTICE: Still Only Swing Into Critical Resistance

Dear Subscribers,

Coming to you a bit later than usual today to catch the only critical US economic data today prior more intensive data releases from Thursday into Friday to this first full week of the month global data onslaught. As such, all of the background remains much the same as reviewed in Monday morning's ALERT!! outside of this morning's US Services and Composite PMIs that came in very strong after roundly weaker equivalent global figures (except for the UK.)

This reinforces US equities strength from the recent psychological continued benefit from tax reform anticipation. Whether it comes to fruition is a key for the equities and other markets. There is still a www.rohr-blog.com "Trump Tax Tract" post on some of the internal issues with the tax reform plan. Yet the US equities have pushed through recent highs into next critical levels at a key weekly Oscillator threshold (more from Monday revisited below.)

Might a strong US Employment report on Friday be enough to foment a major push above that area? Possibly, and we explore the extended potential below.

This is (still) the critical consideration:

After the December S&P 500 future was able to put in a new high above the previous 2,507 all-time high, the next resistance is into the 2,525-30 weekly Oscillator threshold (MA-41 plus 130-135) this week. It has now been hit and is being vigorously tested while the market stalls into that area for now. If the market should escape that resistance, the major extended Oscillator resistance (not seen since early March) is 2,555-60 this week.

Beyond that we refer you back to Monday's ALERT!! for extended background and comments on the current critical considerations on the trend evolution.

Best regards,

The Rohr Alert!! Team
