Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

We are back to being more circumspect on the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE. Which is not to say it will not be very interesting again soon. Yet the weakness this morning leaves it well away from the key technical levels. Those are the 1,925-32 resistance which it found so easy to test on Friday after escaping the lower resistance at 1,902-1,895, That lower bound which had restrained it since it extended its rally above the major 1,865-60 area late the previous week is now support along with that more major lower area..

Of course, the background to the current rally is the shift into a 'bad news is good news' recovery within the overall bear trend. After suffering very temporarily with the Fed remaining convinced that US inflation will continue to rise to its 2.00% target in the FOMC Statement last Wednesday (i.e. still implying it would continue to raise rates), MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE refused to remain back down near 1,865-60 area.

The serial support from Thursday's more accommodative ECB press conference and Friday's surprise (at least somewhat) BoJ move to negative interest rates reinforced the equities ability to rally in spite of serial weak data last week; even in the US.

Of course, much as we saw out of late September into early October, the extended weakness of the data is the cause of a very key 'prismatic' shift in the Evolutionary Trend View: the degree to which the markets now doubt the Fed's ability to raise rates further according to its implied schedule. Of course, that had always been suspect, even right after December's first rate in almost a decade.

Here's the critical consideration today: Sit tight until the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE drops down to test the 1,902-1,895 support or returns to another test of 1,925-32.
