Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

We are back to being more circumspect on the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE. Which is not to say it will not be very interesting again soon. Yet the strength this morning leaves us ambivalent on any key technical trend decision prior to the FOMC January meeting minutes release at 13:00 CST today.

Here's the critical consideration today: MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE continuing its improvement above the major 1,860-65 area is also out above low-mid 1,880s since lunchtime yesterday. The actual short term chart UP Break was 1,886, which is now near term support.

The next resistance at 1,895-1,902 is likely to be breached on a gap higher this morning, with next significant resistance back up into the 1,925-32 range. And there is also interim resistance now in the 1,917 area.

Yet in the context of still very weak global economic data, this feels like a 'bad news is good news' rally in equities. That likely means the markets are anticipating that there was more dissent at the last FOMC meeting than was apparent in Janet Yellen's Congressional testimony last week: a classical Fed friendly bit of anticipation.

And that is why what the minutes actually tells us about other FOMC members either supporting or questioning Ms. Yellen's somewhat hawkish view may be influential out of this afternoon into later this week.
