Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

We are back to being more circumspect on the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE.

Which is not to say it is not highly active at present. However, it would seem that today's activity is not going to be much more than a setup for what transpires into the very critical first week of the month economic data beginning on Tuesday.

Here's the critical consideration today: The key this morning it that Thursday's EQUITIES strength put the MARCH S&P 500 FUTURE back out above the 1,925-32 resistance, which also was still represents a Negation of the 1,922 DOWN Break from last week Thursday. That put the burden of proof was back on the bears to demonstrate the market could fail back below 1,922 to reinvigorate the bearish tendencies. And that most definitely did not occur, as Thursday morning's early low was 1,922.50.

As noted on previous occasions, higher resistances are into the interim 1,950 area, so it's no surprise it was able to reach that once the trend reverted back to stronger activity after last week's Tuesday-Wednesday 'hiccup'. While the next interim resistance in the 1,958-62 area was tested Friday morning, the market dropped back below 1,950 later on Friday. While it still appears to want to hold pullbacks, the next support is in fact back down into violated 1,925-32 resistance with a buffer to 1,922.
