Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

We are circumspect once again on the JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE.

First of all, we hope everyone had an enjoyable Easter holiday weekend, and our European and UK, Canadian and Australian friends (benefits of Commonwealth) will continue enjoying theirs today on Easter Monday. We will certainly still be enjoying ours as well, as we are taking the day off in light of all those other financial centers being closed today.

As it should be a fairly slow day in the US with all of those other important centers still out until tomorrow, we are also going to remain more circumspect. While there is a bit of economic data out in the US on the Trade Balance, Personal Income and Spending and the Dallas Fed Manufacturing Index, we do not believe the market will do anything critical.

Here's the critical consideration today: The JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE holding into the 2,020-10 range last Thursday morning and rebounding later in the day is the sort of resilient sign we expected. Yet the whipsaw so far this morning reinforces the degree to which we would rather observe right now. Getting back up to the 2,035 interim resistance only to drop right back down to 2,027 doesn't seem to indicate anything, It leaves it right in the middle of 2,035 and the low end of the 2,020-10, which now has a Tolerance to 2,008. That makes patience a virtue.

That said, as long as it manages to hold the 2,020-10 area, it should still be able to rally to higher resistances. Those include reinstated 2,035, the additional interim resistances in the 2,050 and 2,060 areas, with the ultimate more major resistance not until 2,075-85.
