Dear Alert Service Subscriber,

We are a bit more circumspect just for now on the JUNE S&P 500 FUTURE.

With the market stabilized after last Friday's test of the key lower support we were looking for since the stall out of the rally three weeks ago (ECB) and UP Break failure two weeks ago (FOMC & BoJ), we are taking a one day holiday today.

All of the background remains much the same as our previous central bank disappointment views, and we refer you back to last Wednesday morning's analysis for the last round of that extensive discussion.

Here's the critical consideration today: The June S&P 500 future weakness below 2,075-78 key support by two weeks ago Thursday into Friday was especially telling after so much ambivalent churn during what should have been a stronger phase. That is especially so with the lower of them also a Tolerance below the 2,078 major weekly chart channel UP Break. That represented a 'Negation' of that UP Break, leaving the higher zone as formidable resistance... confirmed by last week Tuesday's weakness after Monday's squeeze right up into that area.

Recently also below next lower critical support into the mid-April 2,060-55 area gap higher meant it was likely headed into a further selloff once again. Next lower support at 2,035-32 held last Friday in spite of weakness in the US Employment report. While 2,060-55 remains the next higher resistance, the firm nature of the recovery rally might also indicate the ability to test that 2,075-78 Negated major weekly channel UP Break once again as well.

It is likely best to wait for some further consolidation prior to attempting and fresh trend definitive Evolutionary Trend View.
